

Bill To Overhaul Civil Service Act defeated in House

Ottawa.—The Boulanger bill to overhaul the Civil Service Act was defeated in the House of Commons after Premier King pledged the government to introduce a special committee next session to review the whole legislation.

The minister expressed his personal opposition to the bill, but the government, led by the Boulanger bill, diverges from the whole civil service act, Ottawa from that of the commission and hoped "the government will be supported in this attitude."

The premier issued a short speech a few minutes before the hour for private legislation expired and Dr. Thomas Donnelly (Lib., Que.) moved adjournment of the debate.

"Question? Question?" demanded the members, seeking a vote in the bill.

The adjournment motion was put to the house by Speaker Chagnon and defeated.

"Then came the motion on the bill itself. It was brought in a crescendo of 'no's.' Its supporters were not so few in number they could not force a recorded division. Two or three Quebec Liberals, with one Ontario Liberal (L.H. Bell, Chas.), the bill's sponsor.

The bill would have divorced the civil service from the government, limited the returned soldier preference in service of Canada at the expense of the civil service, and the system of hiring and firing professional and technical employees.

The prime minister said some of its provisions were commendable and others not. He did not believe it would promote efficiency by removing the outside service from the jurisdiction of the government.

Mr. McCrellin (Lib., Ont.) said he was prepared to support a motion to refer the bill to a committee but would oppose the Boulanger bill. It contained a considerable number of provisions which could be improved.

The speaker announced he was unable to refer the bill to the returned soldiers' preference.

Floods Carry Away Bridge

Nine-Span Structure At Fredericton, N.B., Cost $1,500,000

FREDERICTON, N.B., (Times)—A recent heavy rain has caused the river nearly 30 feet above its summer level and more than four feet above the highest recorded mark, reached in 1887, the St. John river was still a serious threat.

It is said it has carried away the nine-span bridge of the Canadian National Railways that connects Fredericton with Saint John and provides rail communication with New Brunswick and Montreal.

The bridge, valued at the $1,500,000 structure, says some distance below but with its destruction, the water and ice has backed up into the river to three or four blocks from the river bank raising at the rate of from seven to 10 inches an hour.

Traffic and business was suspended and merchants and private citizens were being evacuated to higher ground.

Believes Canada Is The Richest Mineral Area In The World

Canadian Women Honored

Selected For Outstanding Achievements In Various Fields

New York.—Twenty Canadian women were among a list of 25 selected for outstanding achievement in various fields, announced by the Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

Speaking at a dinner closing the 1935 annual meeting of the Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, Dr. Leonard Wood, president of the institute, said mining was no longer a gamble except in its first stage, it is steadily becoming a highly organized business and an exact science. Up-to-date business methods and every new development in chemical and mechanical science were being used.

Our feature about Canadian mining pleased him. "In most mining areas—certainly in South Africa—the prospect, the man who did the pioneering work, did not reap the fruits of his labor. That was left to the capitalist who came after him, who never stirred from his chair. But here, not only has the prospect often made the big money, but he has often made it himself."

Mining problems were not new to him, the governor-general said. In the first place, the mining industry was compelled to acquire at least a mastery of the question when the future of the gold industry was at stake. The Rand was under consideration.

He said that in Canada, he had seen gold and copper mines in northern Ontario, and in the Yukon, and in the Northwest. He hoped to see a great deal more.

It was a wonderful piece of good fortune for Canada that in these difficult days, the mining industry was not only a source of employment for thousands of men and women, but it was also a source of wealth, much of which can be as readily cashed as a Bank of England note.

Necessity Is Shown For Improving Quality of Barley Grown In Western Canada

Further stress was laid at the National Barley Committee's meeting in Toronto recently by the necessity of improving the condition of western Canada barley before it would achieve popularity in the eastern markets on the prairie showed. Features know little of what varieties were producing. It was reported by W. E. Blackman, district seed officer for the Dominion department of agriculture, at Winnipeg, said samples of seeds taken from more than 100 farms indicated that more than 50 per cent of the sample were barley in the rejected grade.

In his report as chairman of the sub-committee on marketing, T. C. Major, of the department of trade and commerce, said the principal points were for making and feeding barley, though complaints had arisen regarding the presence of wild oats and weeds in the seed.

Prof. R. G. Knox, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, said that in the west there was a better market for barley, they would have to seed out a purer seed of good seed.

The prevalence of weed seeds in western seed was a serious handicap to the sale of wheat to Anglo-Americans as feed.

Prof. Knox said that he was not aware of several grades that would give quality of finish in a hog, better seed of fat and firmness of skin, and better quality of meat.

Major, said that in the United States, Great Britain, South Africa, and elsewhere, barley was regarded as the best of all grains for food.

It was required particularly for barley, was the best for feeding, and better than any other grain for feeding.

Goldfields, Lake Athabasca, has

"I am informed on the very best of authority that the gold fields in the Athabasca district are being worked."

"There is no such thing as a depression up here," he said. "There's no such thing as a depression up here."

He told of a gold rush of "major proportions" that would start in the spring, a rush that would be matched by the eyes of the world.

He told of spending some weeks in New York at Christmas time, of meeting many wealthy men who knew it all.
